Farmers Raise Milk at Loss, Asserts Head of Producers

The following statement, prepared exclusively for the AMERICAN, by President Stanley Abbott of the Boston Cooperative Milk Producers' Company, the organization which has organized the protest against a proposed law, gives the farmers' side of this milk controversy in a most interesting way. Mr. Abbott's statement is given out as he prepared it. Here it is.

By Stanley Abbott, President of the Boston Cooperative Milk Producers' Company.

The following statement of the cost of milk to the producer is based on my experience and observation. It is based on a good average herd of grade cows (not thoroughbreds) producing milk of the standard quality with good average management, plant and apparatus. I make the estimate for the season from the year ending May 1st, 1910.

I have estimated twelve cows at $200, stables, milch, machinery, $1,000, other implements and apparatus, $200, one-half the value of a working team $200; this makes the total value of plant $2,400.

I have considered the total of the land as included in the same for farm and silage. As most of the farming under my experience is mixed farming, I have thought it proper to charge a third of this size with the value of making the milk, as the other half is given to the other work on the farm.

Here is the way the amount stands at the end of twelve months.

By 1200 cows of milk, an average of 865 cows per cow at an average price of 24 1/2 cents, this makes the total value of milk $2,070.

HEINZES GAVE FINE SECURITY FOR $500,000

NEW YORK, April 29.—A staggering sum was given to the president's case in the trial of P. Augustus Heine today when Mr. Heine, president of the Metropolitan National Bank, testified that the bank had given simple collateral for the $500,000 loan to Otto Heine's brother-in-law.

The collateral, he said, was in possession of the bank for two days before he knew it. He was told that it was given to Otto Heine's brother-in-law.

The latter's clerk took him back to the bank and showed the collateral.

O'Brien's testimony caused a sensation, as he was expected to join in an attack on Heine.

NO. AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, APRIL 29, 1906

This is the story of a girl whose father was killed at work in New York City. We publish it exactly as it is sent to the New York Evening Journal, which guarantees the authenticity of the story. Its truth is plainly visible on the face of it.

"Last Saturday evening Annie Belled, a young Italian girl, twenty-two years of age, came to me. She is a tall, slight girl with a good deal of refinement and speaks remarkably good English. As she told her story you realized that she was better informed than the usual factory girl. She is a shirt-waist maker, and has tried for a year to support a sick mother and a little brother and sister. The support of this family fell on her young shoulders when her father was killed in laying some wires for the Subway Construction Company. Some heavy pipes fell on him and he was taken to the hospital. The eight days after the injury, when he knew that he could not live, he begged to be taken home. Annie took him but he died before reaching there.

The Currier's inquest found the construction company liable. Anne said: "My father was a very quiet man, and I knew no one when he died and didn't know what to do. I remembered at last that my father had a friend who was a baker. I went to him and he told me to get a lawyer, and that I must sue the company for damages. We entered suit, and just came up. They all told me that I would win the suit, and not to take the thousand dollars the company offered me, and I thought how little my mother would have of the thousand dollars, as the lawyer had to be paid and the funeral expenses, and there was the rent. The company had been very good to us, and every once in a while a friend had given us ten dollars, and I lay awake at night and wonder if I don't get the money how I shall ever pay all these people back. I have to lose so much time at work, there are so many holidays. When I go home from the factory I try to find a girl who will let me make a waist for her; sometimes I do, and she pays me twenty-five cents, but it takes me almost until 12 o'clock, and then there's the washing, which I have to do, and as my mother is not strong. We have a nice little flat, but rents are very high on the East Side and we have to pay sixteen dollars. We have tried to find another place, but we cannot find anything for less, and the landlord has been so kind.

"My father always kept things very nice for us and worked very hard. On Saturdays and Sundays he used to move people and made a little more money this way. He would not let any of us work when he was living, but we had nothing when he died, because it took it all to live from day to day."

It ought to be SOMEBODY'S business to get justice for this girl, for the sickly wife and the young children deprived of the father's support

It is an outrageous thing that this family of helpless human beings should be at the mercy of their own poverty and the accidental choice of a lawyer.

You see there a girl, one of whose chief worries is THE GREAT NUMBER OF HOLIDAYS, which keep her from working as hard as she would like to.

There is a girl who works all day in a factory, and then works at night and does the family washing.

The company admits its liability for the father's death by offering a thousand dollars to the family—cruel offer, cleverly intended to dazzle poverty into ready acceptance.

A thousand dollars invested at five per cent. would give to the mother and children FIFTY DOLLARS A YEAR!

The father certainly brought in at least between five and six hundred dollars.

If the family took the thousand dollars and kept the money intact —they must starve.

If they took the money and spent it while it lasted, it would soon be gone, and then they must starve.

We hope that there is somebody in the Subway Construction Company of New York City who will think it worth while to make an ex-pany of New York City who will think it worth while to make an exception in the case of this unhappy family and give the family DECENT HUMAN TREATMENT!

But such things should not be left to the charitable impulse of an individual.

THERE SHOULD BE JUSTICE WITHOUT PRICE AND WITHOUT DELAY FOR THE MOTHER AND CHILD.

OUT DELAY FOR THE MOTHER AND CHILDREN.
If that poor working girl had damaged the construction company's property to the extent of a hundred dollars, SHE WOULD HAVE TO PAY BACK A HUNDRED DOLLARS. And nothing could save her

When the construction company kills the husband of that poor woman, the father of her children, the construction company should be compelled to pay what the pany should be compelled to pay what that father was worth to his family, compelled to pension the widow and provide for the children, dollar for dollar.

dren, dollar for dollar, as well as the father could have done if the company had not

We invite those who think that this

We invite those who think that this world is really "civilized," and that there is nothing the matter with those willing to work, to consider the case of this working girl, in a factory long hours every day, at night doing additional work for other girls and washing for her mother and her mother's young children!

THE EASTERN QUESTION

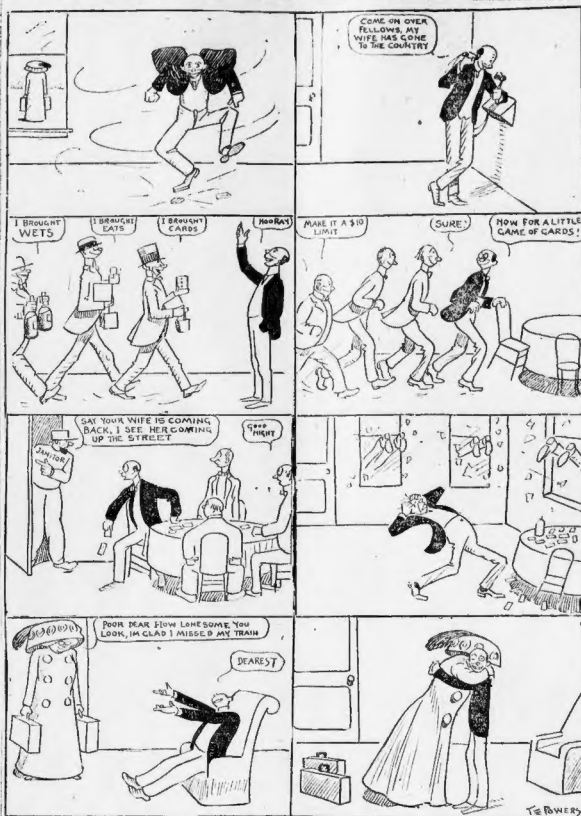

[illegible]

They get their revenge with the Japanese side. Their eyes are now being opened.

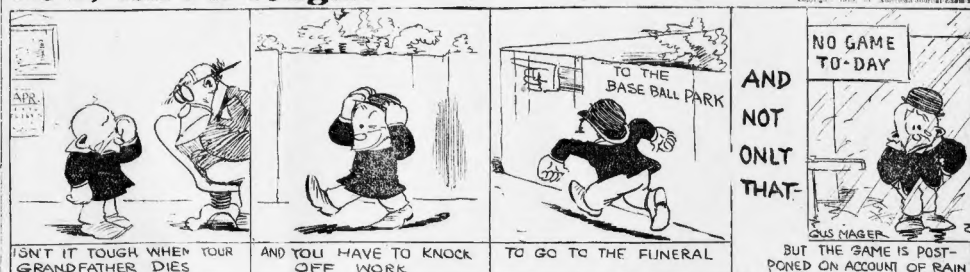

Yet, there is still time enough to put the Japanese back where he belongs, and keep him there. The money powers could take the money and put it in the hands of the money and put him on short rations of money matters.

If the same pressure was brought to bear upon the Japanese we are beginning to look for a change in their attitude. When that little blue flag was created, it was a sign that the Japanese were not an individual can fight without having a red cent in his pockets, but a nation can be made to fight without money.

The money powers may yet repair the damage done by the money powers together with English, British and American war propaganda. But put the Japanese where he belongs.

Now, Isn't It Tough?

That's What They All Say
